

Tamarkin Co. And Stribling Marketing Associates' 508 West 24th Street Nearly Sold Out

Architect and Developer Cary Tamarkin, founder of Tamarkin Co., along with Stribling Marketing Associates, have announced the new residential condominium building 508 West 24th Street is nearly sold out with only two penthouses remaining.

All residences within the Penthouse Collection feature 12-foot ceilings, an entry gallery, expansive open living/dining space, solid five-inch-wide rift and quarter-sawn white oak floors and a private elevator entrance. All are sun-drenched with continuous oversized casement ribbon windows -- a recognized and admired signature of Tamarkin's design.

"The penthouses at 508 West 24th Street deliver remarkable views, beautiful light, luxurious finishes and classic design with great space in the heart of West Chelsea," said Cathy Taub of Stribling Marketing Associates. "The two remaining penthouses are the ideal residences for sophisticated buyers who appreciate the quality and uniqueness of design for which Tamarkin has received critical acclaim."

Adjacent to the High Line and one block south of the Avenues School, the 10-story 508 West 24th Street is designed in the spirit of West Chelsea's industrial-era warehouses, which characterize the neighborhood and are home to some of NYC's most famous galleries. The building offers stunning two- and three-bedroom condominium residences, ranging in size from 2,000 to more than 3,300 square feet and priced from approximately $3 million to $12.5 million.
